Who will access your personal data?

In order to provide high-quality services, we hire people, enters into agreements with private entrepreneurs and partners, also cooperates with other services providers, companies and organisations. For these reasons, some of your personal data can be passed on to the persons mentioned above.

First of all, our employees may have access to your data. Then, we may transfer your data to our sub-contractors and affiliates. We secure such transmission by including standard contractual clauses adopted by the European Commission and compliant with the EU data protection laws into our data processing agreements. When providing us your personal data you agree to such transfer and processing within the purposes set in this Privacy Policy.

To do this, we may share your information with these third parties in the following limited circumstances:

- Our Partners from whom you purchase products: We rely on carefully selected partners that supply the products that you see in our Website.
- Our Distributors who may advise you in relation to new or existing Products: We rely on carefully selected Distributors that advise you. We allow our Distributors advise you only subject to your consent.
- Third party service providers for business purposes: to function properly, we rely on a number of carefully selected third parties to provide us with services and products. We permit these companies to use your personal information only to the extent necessary to provide us with their services and products. Below you can find the types of third parties we use:
  - Courier companies that we or our Partners use in order to deliver the products to you and, as such, they need to have access to your order information, including your name and address. These providers have a global outreach, with many local companies that can be engaged depending on your shipping address.
  - Payment and acquiring providers that we use to process your payment information (including your credit/debit card details) so that we can collect payment from you.
  - Anti-fraud and credit check providers to keep us and you secure. They have access to and process your information and associated orders in order to check for any fraudulent behaviour.
  - Analytics and search engine providers, like Google, that we use to assist us in the improvement and optimisation of the website. These providers are based in the United States and in Europe.
  - Marketing Tools providers that help us to enable our marketing.
  - Performance Marketing and Recommendations Providers that help us deliver advertising and recommendations of the products tailored to your interests and needs.
  - Research companies that we can engage to help us carry out surveys regarding your use of our Website and Services.
  - IT/technology providers that we use to support, maintain and provide our technology and IT infrastructure that supports our Website and the storage of your information.

Please note that we don't name a full list of the third-party service providers because of some reasons. Firstly, this list is huge enough, and different third party service providers can be engaged for the different region. Secondly, this list is updated and amended very often. However, based on this Privacy Policy you may request us for information about the third-party service provider related to the services provided to you.

- Advertisers for marketing purposes: we can provide your information to our advertising and social media partners (including Facebook and Twitter, where you choose) where they require the data to select and serve relevant adverts about our and our partners' products and services to you and others;
- Third party service providers to enrich data: We may also enrich, match or combine information we hold about you with data from other sources, for instance by sharing some of your personal data with selected business partners. We do this to better understand your customer profile and interests so that we can deliver customised offers and other personalised services;
- Third parties where we are considering a corporate transaction: we are always looking for new opportunities and directions in which to grow. This means sometimes we may consider corporate transactions such as merger, acquisitions, reorganisations, asset sale, or similar. In these instances, we may transfer your information to enable the assessment and undertaking of that transaction. If we buy or sell any business or assets, your personal information may be one of the assets that are transferred;
- To comply with legal requests: on occasion, we may be required to liaise with various regulators and law enforcement agencies in a number of different countries, whether as a result of law, a court order, or another legal process. Although we dispute requests wherever suitable, in some cases we may have to share your information with the regulators or law enforcement agencies. Where we consider it appropriate, and provided we are not prohibited from doing so by law or court order, we will attempt to notify you of these legal demands; and
- Aggregated information with third parties: we may aggregate your information with the information of other customers, creating a dataset of information about the usage of our Website, purchase of products, and other general, grouped information about our customers on the basis of our legitimate interest to understand the usage of our service and demand for our product. Although this dataset is aggregated and anonymised, meaning it cannot identify you as an individual, it provides a valuable insight into the use of our Website and we may therefore share it with select third parties. These parties may include providers of plugins or similar technologies to help measure traffic, our Partners and other providers to allow them to better stock products, and our investors.

We have contractors in other countries. Your personal data may be available to our contractors and partners in the jurisdictions outside the European Union. You may be sure that the transfer of your data to the recipients in other countries is secured and compliant with the applicable data protection laws.

In all cases when we transfer your personal data to other persons, we are confident that your personal data is protected and used only for the purposes specified in this Privacy

Policy. We achieve such safety by using only certified services and products, signing agreements on protection of personal data with contractors and partners, as well as taking technical measures to ensure the data is protected when stored and used, and also while being processed and transferred.

You also have to be aware of the fact that we may disclose your personal data to enforce and comply with the law. In other words, we may disclose information necessary for the investigation or legal process on official request or the official bodies acting within their powers.

Please, note that our Website may contain the links to other platforms and websites. This Privacy Policy does not cover the collection and processing of data from the moment when you follow such links. You will be governed by the conditions of the Privacy Policies of those platforms and websites. Thus, we encourage you to read that Privacy Policies carefully.

There are three reasons where we may share your data with third-parties that we have not listed here:

- Professional Advisers and Investors: We may also share your data with professional advisers such as our lawyers and insurers to manage risks and legal claims, and/or as part of our relationship and obligations to our investor organisations. This is in our legitimate interests.
- Group: It is possible we could sell our business to a third party or reorganise our business or become insolvent. In that scenario, our database of customers is one of the biggest parts of that business and so we would need to share it with the third-party buyer and their advisers. This is in the legitimate interests of selling our business.
- Law Enforcement/Legal Compliance: We will cooperate with all third parties to enforce their intellectual property or other rights. We will also cooperate with law enforcement requests from within or outside your country of residence. This may include disclosing your personal information to government or law enforcement agencies, or private parties, when we have a good faith belief that disclosure is required by law or when we, in our discretion, believe that disclosure is necessary to protect our legal rights, or those of third parties and/or to comply with a judicial proceeding, court order, fraud reduction or legal process served on us. In such cases, we may raise or waive any legal objection or right available to us. These uses of your data are in our legitimate interests of protecting our business security. We may also use your data and share it with the recipients listed in this Privacy Policy for the purpose of complying with our legal obligations.

How we may use your data for marketing purposes and additional data we may request permission for.

Part of the role of the COMPANY is to market the Products and Services to enable more people to purchase items listed on the Website. To do so we use a number of different third-parties to help us with these initiatives. We see these anonymised transfers of data as critical to the running and future success of our business and you cannot opt-out of them if you use our Services.

In addition to the anonymised data we send to the third-parties, we may ask permission from you to use extended data to help give you a better service. A better service may include (but is not limited to):

- the ability for us to personalise our email communication to you based on identifiable information;
- the ability for us to place advertisements (including product listings) on the third-party websites based on your browsing or purchasing history with us;
- whilst browsing the Website, having us push relevant deals and information to you based on your specific interactions with the website.

For this we will ask you to opt-in to our marketing initiatives; you will automatically be opted-out of these services when you join the Website. If at any stage, you would like to opt in or out you can do so in your account settings.

The additional data We will request permission to use to send to the third-parties is as follows:

Data provided by You	Use
Email address	To identify you on the third-party services and internally.
Name	To improve user experience with email and advertising personalisation and re-targeting
Date of birth	Allows us to offer you exclusive discounts in celebration of Your birthday. Helps us identify product deals more relevant to you based on purchases of other people in Your age demographic.
Gender	Helps us identify product deals more relevant to you, and improve service based on learnings of others similar to you.
Other data we use	Use
Purchase data	Helps us identify product deals more relevant to you.
Email engagement data	For engagement analysis and optimization.
